This document is an extraction of all living males in the Chortitza Mennonite Settlement for the year 1811. Like most Russian Revision Lists there is a column for the ages of the person in the last Revision List (in this case 1795) and a column indicating the year of death for anyone who died between Revision Lists. If a new family head took over during the period between Revision Lists, this is also indicated. The 6th Russian Revision List was constructed for the Chortitza colony on August 16th, 1811. The 1795 (5th) Revision List, together with scans of the original, can be found here.

It is important to realize that the information found in this document comes from an official Russian “Revision List”. Every person in the colony had to be registered for head-tax purposes. To avoid registration was the equivalent of tax evasion and punishable by various penalties. Just because a person was registered with a particular family does not necessarily mean that person physically lived with the family.

Some of those labelled “son” were actually stepsons and their full names are given in the last column.

Those who appear under the 1811 column but are not given ages in the 1795 census either were not born until after the 1795 census or immigrated after the 1795 census.

If the person is given an age in the 1795 census the last column attempts to identify the family in which they were counted in that census. For any person over the age of 16 in the 1811 census, but not found in the 1795 census, immigration information is provided. There are those who have ages in the 1795 census, according to this census, but are not actually found in the available 1795 census. These people arrived in late 1795 and were likely added to the census that year. Those arriving after 1795 are not found in this version or the available version of the 1795 census.

Note that all village, first and family names have been “standardized”. Cells highlighted in yellow indicate that the needed information is either missing or considered highly suspect.

Printing Note: This document is formatted for 8½ x 14 paper.
